Glen Dawson: Mountaineer and Bookman by Elizabeth Pomeroy

Foreword by Thomas F. Andrews

Glen Dawson was born in 1912, seven years after his father opened Ernest Dawson's Antique Book Shop in downtown Los Angeles.

Mentored by his father and fueled by his own determination, young Dawson rose to prominence in two very different spheres.

As a partner at Dawson's Book Shop for 60 years, he was influential in rare book circles. An avid climber and lifelong world traveller, he achieved dozens of mountaineering first ascents.

This volume explores the many facets of Dawson's incredible life, including his family, business, publications and support of organizations and institutions.

Like Glen Dawson, the author is a Life Member of the Sierra Club.

Elizabeth Pomeroy is a California native, teacher and writer. She holds degrees from Stanford, Harvard, UC Berkeley, and UCLA, where she earned a Ph.D. in English.

She is the author of Lost and Found, a collection of essays on historic places; John Muir: A Naturalist in Southern California; and San Marino: A Centennial History; as well as books on the Huntington Library and Elizabethan literature.

Thomas F. Andrews, Ph.D. in History, was the Executive Director of the Historical Society of Southern California for 19 years.

He knew Glen Dawson personally and summarized this book perfectly in the title of his foreword: "A Life Well Lived, Now Well Told."

This collectible volume was produced honoring the Dawson style of classic, elegant bookmaking. It's a must-have for students of California history and bibliophiles.
